George Steward,

RESPECTFULLY informs the inhabitants of this city and its vicinity, that he has opened a Livery Stable, where he intends to carry it on in a manner calculated to do justice to himself and accommodate all others who may please to give him a call, having altered his stable expressly for the purpose, which is inferior to none in the place. He also intends to keep good riding horses to hire—calculated for journeys of any length. Having procured careful managers to superintend the business, he will be enabled to give general satisfaction.

Good saddles and bridles in every case shall be furnished, necessary for the comfort of the rider—when thus caparisoned it is presumed that justice will be done to horses, so justly their due.

Terms of hire and other affairs relative to the establishment, made known at the time of hiring.

He has also laid in an excellent quantity of oats and hay, and feed of every description.

Gentlemen committing horses to his care, may rest assured of unremitting attention in every particular.

UNCOMMON FLOOD.

After a continuation of intense cold during the month of February, unprecedented for severity in our recollection, the weather on Saturday became mild; and towards Sunday evening it began to rain, and continued raining until 12 o'clock on Monday night with very little intermission, the thermometer ranging from the freezing point to 45. The water in the Hudson began to raise on Monday morning, and on Tuesday morning was flush with the top of the docks. About nine o'clock, the ice came down from above, and broke up as low as Hamilton-street, where its further progress was stopped for a time by the projecting shores. In the mean time the impetuosity of the current drove the ice in large masses into the whole extent of Quay street, completely filling it, in some places to the height of ten and fifteen feet, and piling it in enormous heaps upon the island opposite the city. The entire row of wooden buildings in Quay street, between Mark lane and Columbia-street, sustained more or less injury. The lower house, occupied by Mr. Robert Davis, was crushed to atoms, the family barely escaping. In several others the ice drove in the entire fronts, overwhelming every opposing obstacle. A barn, blacksmith's shop and some smaller buildings, near the river, and above Columbia-street, were also partially demolished—Several trees of considerable magnitude upon the upper point of the island, were prostrated in a moment by the tremendous power of the water and ice.—The spectacle was grand and terific. Large fields of solid ice some feet in thickness, were sometimes raised perpendicularly, and thrown over on to the yet immoveable ice below. At other times the weight of the incumbent mass pressed down the upper edge of that which was yet unmoved, until the force of the current broke it off, and it was driven underneath, until the whole depth of the channel, in some places 20 feet, became completely choaked.—This spectacle lasted about 20 minutes, when the ice was completely stopped by the resistance below.

At two o'clock the water had risen considerably; and the new pressure occasioned by the ice coming down from the Mohawk and the flood of water which had accumulated above, became too powerful for the obstacles which had hitherto interposed below, and the whole mass began to move with resistless impetuosity, as far down as the eye could discern, greatly multiplying and augmenting the calamities which had already befallen our citizens. The Slaughter House in the upper part of the city was swept off entirely with property valued at 6,000 dollars, a part of the upper market was prostrated, and a new two story house standing opposite to it, belonging to and occupied by Thomas Taite, was wholly demolished. This soon gave place to a new scene of distress. About three o'clock the ice dammed up below; and immediately the water began to rise, and continued rising very rapidly until it had attained an unprecedented height, and inundated the southern and eastern sections of the city. Quay, Dock, Water & Church streets, & south Market street below the old city hall, as well as the east ends of all the streets running at right angles with the river, were covered with water, and through some of them it coursed in torrents. Probably not less than 400 families have been sufferers, more or less, & some have encountered very serious losses. Yet we are happy to learn that precautions were taken so early that the property in the ware-houses on the dock sustained very little injury.

From the sudden rise of the waters, many persons were prevented getting to their families, and others from escaping from situations of peril. Severals were relieved in the evening whose situations were critical, and some of them must have perished but for the timely assistance rendered. Much credit is due to Lieut. Gantt, and Lieut. Broughton, of the army, for their disinterested exertions. They volunteered their services, and waded up to their breasts repeatedly in water, at night, to relieve the helpless.

Some buildings at Greenbush have been injured, and a small store near the ferry stairs demolished. From abroad, we hear of much damage having been done to bridges; and the list will no doubt be greatly swelled by subsequent accounts. Three bridges have been swept off on the Delaware, one over the Esopus Kill at Kingston, the toll bridge at Catskill partly destroyed, and most of the bridges on the Battenkill swept off. The toll bridge on the Northern turnpike gave way to the mighty force of the current a few moments after the mail stage had crossed it.

In consequence of the flood, we have received no mail from New-York since our last publication.

HARTFORD, (Con.) March 9.

Distressing Calamity.—It seldom falls to our lot to record so distressing an event, as we are now under the painful necessity of presenting to the public. It is not an event that interests only one or two individuals—but one in which the whole community are concerned. It is impossible for us, at this time, to give a very particular account of the damage sustained, by the late inundation—we shall, therefore, attempt but a brief sketch of what has come under our observation.

On Sunday the 1st inst. it commenced raining and continued without much intermission until Monday morning. During that time the water rose in the small streams very rapidly, and the ice, altho' very thick, was broken up, and carried down the current with great violence. In the afternoon, the town bridge erected across the small river, running through this City, was carried away by the ice. In consequence of the rapid rise of the water, the ice in Connecticut river broke up on Tuesday morning, and carried away the whole of the draw part of the bridge, erected across the river, opposite this city—and in the afternoon, the water rose still higher, the ice started some distance up the river, came down with great rapidity, and in a short time about one half of the second arch gave way and fell with a most tremenduous crash. That part of the bridge now standing is much injured.

Two vessels were torn from the wharf, by the great body of ice, and carried down the river—one of which grounded about a mile below this city, the other, (having one man on board,) was carried down three or four miles, when the person on board succeeded in bringing her to anchor, and got safe on shore. We are informed that considerable damage has been done at Middletown—that two stores were demolished by the ice. From every quarter we hear of the destruction of bridges, mills, &c. &c. The new bridge erected across the Connecticut river at Springfield: is among the number. The loss sustained, even in the neighbourhood of this city is immense."

NEWSPAPERS.

The Editors of the United States Gazette and True American, of this city, have consolidated their respective papers into one establishment, under the general title of "the Union." In this new form it made its appearance the 9th inst. as a morning paper. From the known talents of Mr. Bronson, of the Gazette of the United States, and Mr. Smith's (of the True American) typographical skill and industry, we may reasonably expect that this association will be equally satisfactory to the proprietors as well as to the public,

On the 23d of last month a new daily paper made its appearance in this city, called the Franklin Gazette, conducted by Mr. Richard Bache, at present Postmaster in this city. Independently of its Prospectus, this paper has as yet, taken no particular station, in the ranks of diurnal publications. Its political complection is avowedly democratic; but in this "dull piping time of peace," its Editor has had no chance "to throw a javelin, or to whet a spear."—When the "tug" of an election comes on, then will "Turk meet Turk." With his resources and industry, however, we believe that this Gazette, like all others, may be made tolerably interesting to its readers—until Bonaparte escapes from St. Helena.

A PIG WITH TWO TAILS.

About the year 1727, when the back settlers of this country were as proverbial for their prejudices as ever the first settlers of Plymouth were, an old woman about 120 miles from Richmond, on James River, was so unfortunate as to have a sow litter with a pig with two tails. The circumstance soon over-run the settlement. A general alarm was spread—and the parson of the parish was resorted to by the affrighted people to account for this wonderful phenomenon. The sage divine, after duly considering the affair, declared that as pigs by nature were endowed with but one tail, it was probable that the devil was officious in the generation of this litter; and as he cannot make any thing perfect, these two tails were left as a mark of his imperfection. The parson further observed, that as other neighbours had sows on whom the evil spirit might have tried his operations, his partiality for this old woman was a proof that she must have a connection with him, and that she could be nothing less than a WITCH. The woman was immediately apprehended, and it was determined to tie her up in a sack and throw her into the river, when if she FLOATED she was a witch and must be HUNG—if she SUNK, then she was innocent. A vast concourse of people assembled on the banks to see the operation; and while the church-wardens were absolutely engaged in drawing the bag over her, a colonel Taylor who lately arrived from Ireland, hit on the following stratagem to save her!

"By my soul," said he to the wardens, "ye are all wrong—you know nothing about witches—now in Ireland we have found out a much surer way, with but half the trouble." The people were anxious to hear the Irish method; "why (says the colonel) my jewels, we put the woman in one scale and the big church bible in the othe—if the bible outweighs the woman she is a witch and must be burnt—but if the woman is the heaviest, she is no witch, by my soul."—The colonel's method was approved of—the trial made, and thus the life of a woman preserved, who, but for Col. Taylor's stratagem, must have fallen a sacrifice to the prejudice of an illiterate people.

DESULTORY GLEANINGS.

EXTRACT FROM A LONDON OBITUARY.

APRIL, 1788. Died in Greville-street near Hatton-Garden, where she lived many years with great respectability, and enjoyed an uncommon share of good health and spirits, at the age of 74, Madame Catherine Rollar. She was a principal dancer on Covent-Garden stage fifty years ago, and followed that profession by private teaching to the last moment of her life. She had so much celebrity in her day, that having one evening sprained her ancle, no less an actor than Quin was ordered by the manager to make an apology to the audience for her not appearing in the dance. Quin, who looked upon her and all dancers as the mere garnish of the stage, at first demurred, but being threatened with a forfeiture, he growlingly came on, and in his coarse (rather say brutal) way thus addressed the audience: "Ladies and gentlemen, I am desired by the manager to inform you, that the dance intended for this night is obliged to be postponed on account of Mademoiselle Rollar having dislocated her ancle. I wish it had been her neck, the b——."

ROYAL MARRIAGES.

AFTER the ceremony of the marriage of the Prince of Orange and the Princess Royal, about eleven, the royal family supped in public, in the great state ball room. About one the bride and bridegroom retired, and were afterwards seen by the nobility, &c. sitting up in their bed-chamber, in rich undresses. [London paper, 17 4.

AT the marriage of the princess Saxe-Gotha with the prince of Wales, after supping in Ambigu, their majesties retiring to the apartments of the prince of Wales, the bride was conducted to her bed chamber and the bridegroom to his dressing room, where the duke undressed him, and his majesty did his royal highness the honour to put on his shirt. The bride was undressed by the princesses; and being put in bed in a rich undress, his majesty came into the room, and the prince following soon after, in a night gown of silver stuff and a cap of the finest lace, the quality were admitted to see the bride and bridegroom sitting up in bed, surrounded by all the royal family.

Curious effect of Paste on Iron.

Mr. Editor.—I think it may render a service to the manufacturing interest, to publish the following in your useful Gazette. Yours &c.

At Deanston, near the village of Down in the county of Perth, there is a manufactory where Cotton is woven by machinery. Iron cylinders were used in order to apply the weaver's dressings to the cloth. This dressing, as is well known, is nothing but common paste, made of wheat flour or barley meal. The cast iron cylinder was in a short time rendered quite soft, and similar to plumbago, (black lead) by the action of the paste. This corrosion took place repeatedly, and it was so rapid that the proprietors of the manufactory were obliged to substitute wood in place of the iron. I conceive that the paste employed was usually sour, that it was the acid developed, which, by dissolving the Iron, produced this curious effect. A similar effect is produced upon cast iron by the action of Muriate of Magnesia (Glauber Salts) and probably other salts.

SINGULAR WILL.

A few days since, an eccentric character, named Smith, who lived at Pancras, and who had been for some time in a declining state of health, called for pen, ink and paper to make his will. As he was in very indigent circumstances, the poor woman, in whose house he lodged, was not a little surprised at this request. She however humoured him, and he wrote that which he called his will, on a sheet of paper, which he placed under his pillow, and desired it might not be opened until he was dead and cold—his order was attended to. He died on Wednesday night, and on Thursday morning his will was opened in the presence of two or th neighbours, when its contents were fou to be a simple bequest of his body to a celebrated anatomist, in order to save funera expences and unnecessary trouble. Hi other effects, which were merely wearin apparel, he left to his landlady. Notwithstanding this unusual legacy, it is intended to give the body a decent burial.

HANCE SCOT

March 13, 1818 ——3

PITTSBURGH.

FRIDAY, MARCH 20, 1818.

I take this occasion to notify my patrons that I have disposed of one half of the establishment of the Gazette to MORGAN NEVILLE, Esq. This gentleman's character stands so high, and his eminent qualifications, both as to talents and acquirements, are so well known to every one in this city, and to many in the surrounding country, and in the neighbouring towns, that I doubt not but the subscribers of the paper (as well as myself) will find in this rrangement an acquisition very way desirable.

The first of May next, being the time now proposed for the enlargement of the Gazette, (as lately announced) is likewise the me agreed upon for the partnership to mmence: and, as the paper will then be a measure renovated, we shall give a rospectus upon the occasion, fixing with recision the character of our views and rinciples. Under the fair auspices which eem likely to await that period I trust that ere will be wanting neither zeal, nor fidelity, nor industry, to merit the general pprobation of the patrons of this veteran stablishment.

JOHN I. SCULL.

The Norwich (Conn.) Courier of the 4th st. enumerates thirteen bridges by name, hich have been either swept away or materially injured by the recent floods in the cinity of that place.

A Washington Correspondent of the Alexandria Gazette, complains of the manner which Committees are treated by Congress. After they have laboured 16 hours the 24 in investigating and maturing a ject which has been referred to them for purpose—and, proud of their work, ve made their report, they find it cut and rked by those who view the subject almost for the first time, and finally perhaps dely thrown out. But as all Congressmen are occasionally on Committees, all e exposed to mortification in turn. Some provements, however, are certainly wanting in Legislation. No measure affecting e feelings and interests of a considerable rtion of the community, or our relations th foreign countries, should be proposed thout a moral certainty of its being passed. This may be known by previous conversations.

The legislature of Massachusetts have ssed an act, prohibiting any person from actising Physick in that state, unless he s received a medical degree from some llege or university, or college of physicians. Three physicians are to be appointed in each county of the state, with power examine candidates, and give licenses.

A motion for adjournment on the 31st of arch, has been made in Congress by Mr. ergeant,—it was afterwards altered to h April. The motion resulted in a proposition for a joint committee to inquire hat business remains to be done, and to the day, 81 to 78—Committee, House Representatives, Sergeant, Johnson, Pitkin, Taylor, Pleasants—Of the Senate, aggett, Galliard, and Tichenor.

It is expected an adjournment will ke place about the 20th April.—Union.

INDIAN WAR.

From the Georgia Journal Feb. 24

By a gentleman from Hartford we learn, at the detachments of Georgia militia re organized on the 15th and encamped the south side of the Ocmulgee. Col. omer V. Milton was elected to command lower, and Capt. John E. Little (of ikes) the upper regiment. On the day llowing, six companies under command of Maj. Fannin, Assist Div Insp. rched to Fort Early. On Saturday evening last the rear of the army was crossing r Mile creek, being that distance from rtford. A junction with the Tennessee detachment was expected to take ace at Fort Scott on the 1st of next onth,

The Indians, in the meantime, continue ir horrid cruelties, A large family of e name of Grantham are said to have en recently murdered on the frontier, between Hartford and the Alabama, and it is ported that two boys were killed near rt Scott.

The correspondent of the Raleigh (North Carolina) Minerva, states, that on Saturday the 21st of February, Mr. HOPKINSON closed the debate on the motion to ike out the first section of the Bankrupt ill, by going, sentence by sentence, (like estion and answer) into a refutation and posure of the futility of the several arguments offered in opposition, bestowing in rms of polite advice a sharp and just rebuke upon Mr. Pindall for some expressions in his speech which had bordered on ofaneness and for which that gentleman had been rather roughly handled by General Samuel Smith the day before. "The honourable gentleman," said Mr. Hopkinson, "has presented himself in a new character,—We had seen him before with pleasure in that of the scholar, the man of sense, the lawyer and the orator—it is only on this occasion that he has attempted to figure as a WIT! I only wish he had been more successful, for I am glad when any thing occurs to promote pleasantry in the house—though it should be at the expence of any measure of mine, or even at myself—I can share in the enjoyment and join in the laugh—I can hear without reluctance the Bankrupt Law and the bill made a subject of merriment; but the honorable gentleman WILL DO BETTER, not to carry again his levity to things SACRED to the Apostles of JESUS CHRIST, or to the Scriptures of God!"

It appears from the communication transmitted by the Governor of South Carolina to the President, and by him laid before the House of Representatives, that an amendment to the Constitution, passed by two-thirds of both Houses of Congress, and it was supposed concurred in by the requisite majority of the states, was not in fact concurred in, but was rejected by the State of South-Carolina, who had been supposed to have ratified it, and that, without her vote, the proposition did not receive the sanction of two-thirds of the states. The amendment referred to has been printed with the late editions, as a part of the Constitution, and is in the following words;

"Resolved, by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled, two-thirds of both Houses concurring, that the following section be submitted to the legislatures of the several states, which, when ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the states, shall be valid and binding as a part of the constitution of the United States—If any citizen of the United States shall accept, claim, receive, or retain any title of nobility or honor, or shall, without the consent of Congress, accept and retain any present, pension, office, or emolument, of any kind whatever, from any emperor, king, prince or foreign power, such person shall cease to be a citizen of the United States, and shall be incapable of holding any office of trust or profit under them or either of them."

It ought to be generally known, as it is now ascertained, that this amendment was not ratified by three-fourths of the States, and therefore is not a part of the Constitution.

Nat. Intel.

The proposition to tax the stock of individuals in the bank of the United States, which has been before the House of Representatives of this State sometime, and has at length been negatived, afforded considerable diversion to the gallery in its progress. At first there was such an earnestness on the part of Mr. Marks who introduced the proposition, and Mr. Stewart &c. who supported it, that there was no question about the measure being enacted. The wise ones who cater for the Philadelphia papers came here only to ascertain the amount of tax that would be imposed; and from personal inspection and feeling of the members, these wise ones set it down as varying from $ 25,000 to $ 60,000 per annum. As for the gallery it knew nothing at all about the matter, save that, in the stages previous to the introduction of a bill, there was a tardiness that had the appearance of a cooling off among the projectors of the measure.—When the bill came first up in committee of the whole, some of its first friends appeared to have taken so many new views of the subject, & differed so widely from others of the same side in their arguments in favor of it, that it presently began to be whispered about that these new views did not proceed from poring over books and wasting the midnight oil, but that they did proceed from poring over a calculation of the nett proceeds of a good fat office. What office can it be? said one. What! said another, his sturdy patriotism be shaken by an office? 'Tis impossible.—Not so fast said a third, with my own eyes I saw a recommendation handed about in favor of a certain member's appointment as attorney of the United States for the western district of this State, that is now about to be erected by congress; and the President disapproves of this tax.—And sure enough when the bill came up a second time, the new views were converted into downright opposition to the whole affair at this time.—Then came the harvest of the sneerers. Where now is your mighty champion of State Rights? where is your stiff advocate of the rights of the people, against the pitiful quibbling and chicanery of Attornies and Judges? He admits the right of the State to tax the bank; he admits the expediency of taxing it, but not at this time: because—not because of the District Attorneyship!—but because it might bring the State into a law suit with the United States. Ha ha, ha, responded the gallery.—Chronicle.

Butler, the well known author of Hudibrass, was so little noticed by his countrymen in his life time, that he is said to have died in a state of starvation. At a subsequent period, when his reputation was fully acknowledged, not only by the nation to which he belonged, but by the world, as a great wit and poet, a monument was erected to his memory in Westminster Abbey. Alluding to these circumstances, an Epigrammatist in England, applied to the case the passage of Scripture—He asked for bread, and they gave him a stone. We have been struck, (says the N. York Advertiser) with the conduct and feelings of our countrymen, in different places and situations, as they have been exhibited this winter, with regard to revolutionary officers and soldiers. The President introduced the subject of providing for the wants and comforts of the few who remain of those men, to whom the country is so deeply indebted, by some act of the national government. The matter was referred to a committee, and through their instrumentality laid before the House of Representatives, where its reception, by a large number of that body, to say the least of it, was cold, ungenerous, uncharitable, and ungrateful.—At the same time, an individual claim, that of Gen. St. Clair's, became the subject of examination and discussion. After great delay, long debates, many objections and difficulties, that veteran obtained, instead of a debt of five or six thousand dollars, which is stated to be justly due to him, a pension, as the National Intelligencer says of $720 per annum, but which we understand to be $60 per month—an allowance, which, if the old gentleman should live twelve months, will, it is true, amount to $720 a year, but will cease whenever he shall die, and in that way, may, as was probably calculated might be the case, save as many dollars as there may be months remaining of the last year of his life. This is certainly prudent, economical and frugal—in short, every thing but liberal and just.
